Parent Nursery School Wants To Take Over Bay

A possible solution to the problem of what to do about Bay School, which has concerned the Highlands Association and the Carmel Unified School District for the past two weeks is offered in the proposal that has been made to the superintendent, Stuart Mitchell, that Bay School be turned over to the use of the Carmel Parent Nursery School which at present is occupying the basement of the Carmel Youth Center.

Two weeks ago Superintendent Stuart Mitchell sent out notices to parents of students attending Bay, the "little red school house" between Carmel and Point Lobos, on the inlet at the mouth of San Jose Creek, informing them that the school district trustees propose to close Bay next term because there are only 11 students, and transport the Bay children to River School by bus. The district would save $6000 and gain the services of another teacher at River School by the "temporary" closing of Bay.

The Highlands Association, meeting last week, decided to offer an official protest at school board meeting next Wednesday. The sentimental attachment of

Twelfth Night Or Salome? Tryouts Will Determine Forest Theater Production

It's either Twelfth Night or Salome. Torn between his desire to stage another Shakespeare play in the Forest Theatre this summer and his hope of putting on a play that would be sure to pay expenses, Herbert Heron is still undecided which to do. So he is going to try an experiment. On Thursday evening (tonight) he will hold try-outs for Twelfth Night, and on Friday evening he will hold try-outs for Salome. If the material available for actors, actresses, and crowds, and the men and women needed to make up a good production staff, as well as the enthusiasm that a big production requires if it is to be successful — if they work out best for Twelfth Night, that will be the choice. If, on the other hand, Salome shows more promise of being the right one to stage, then it will be Salome.

The try-outs will be held at 8:00 o'clock in the Guild Hall of the Forest Theater, corner of Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel, and all who may be interested in any of the parts or in any place on the production staff are invited to be present. Thursday evening will be devoted to Twelfth Night, Friday evening to Salome, and Saturday evening to final try-outs for whichever is the play decided upon.

Over the years Heron has directed three productions of Twelfth Night in Carmel, and is thoroughly familiar with the play and its requirements. He considers it Shakespeare's most delightful comedy, though The Merchant of Venice and A Midsummer-Night's Dream, both of which he has staged in the Forest Theater, are very dear to his heart.

Salome, of course, is pure tragedy. From the first lines of the first scene we know that something terrible is going to happen, and it is only the beauty of Oscar

ESSAY PRIZE WINNERS

On the feature page of this issue are published the second prize winning essays in the Carmel American Legion Auxiliary Americanism Contest. Next week's Pine Cone will carry the first prize winners.

After reading the essays on the feature page, Carmelites will not have to be urged by the Pine Cone to display their flags and visit the military installations on Saturday, Armed Forces Day.

Army, Navy, Coast Guard All Set To Welcome You Sat., Armed Forces Day

Fort Ord, the Navy Post Graduate School, the Navy Auxiliary Air Station, The Army Language School, the Coast Guard Station at Monterey, even the lighthouses at Pacific Grove and Point Sur are making elaborate preparations for hospitality and entertainment of civilians of the Monterey Peninsula on Armed Forces Day, Saturday.

The program at Fort Ord starts at 10:15 Saturday morning with a full dress review of the 6th Infantry division with an aircraft flyover.

Mess halls will be open from 11:30 to 1:30 to visitors who wish to have "lunch" with the army, and army cooks will have prepared eight tons of fried chicken, several hundred gallons of giblet gravy, four and a half tons of mashed potatoes, to go with the buttered lima beans, tomato juice, fruit salad, bread and butter, and over a thousand gallons of ice cream, for which adults will pay 60 cents a plate, children 30 cents.

The Soldiers Club and Service Club will be open to those who prefer to dine there, and several picnic areas will be available for families bringing a picnic lunch.

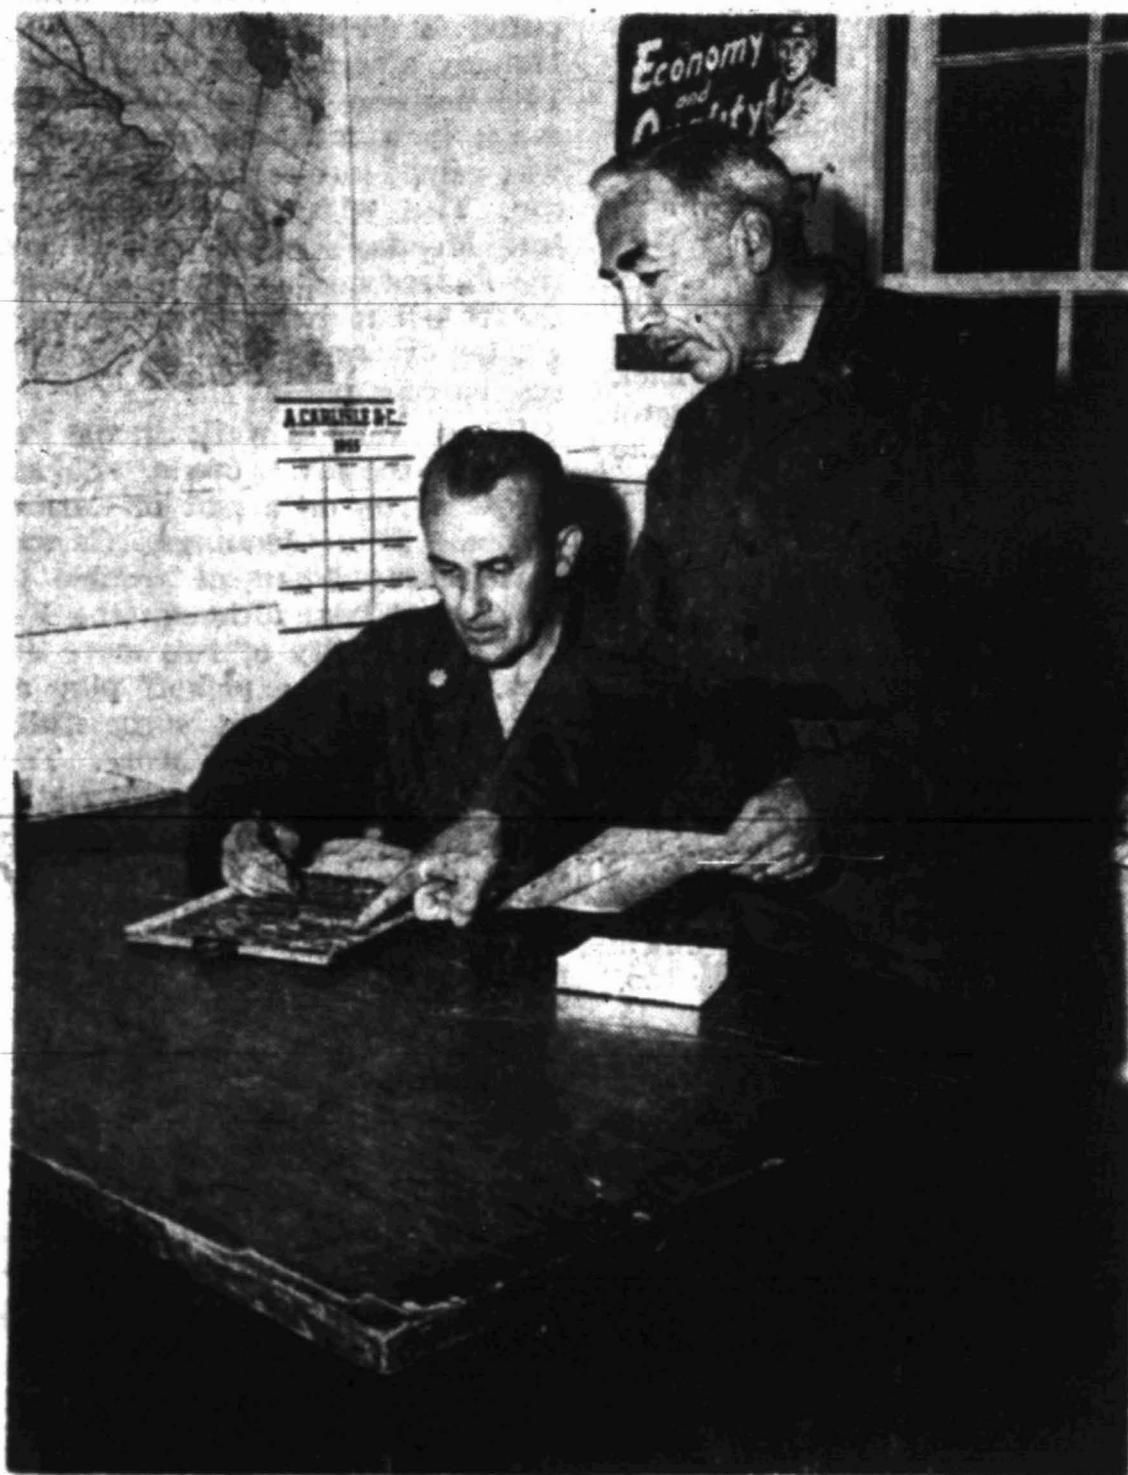

At 1:00 o'clock the 6th Infantry Division band will give an hour's concert at the display area.

The Model Airplane club of Monterey will offer an exhibition of combat flying, stunt flying and simulated aircraft carrier landings at 1:30.

Also at 1:30 a double-header baseball game will start at the athletic field, pitting the 1st Field Artillery against the 63rd Infantry regiment. In the second game the 41st Signal Battalion will play the 20th Infantry Regiment.

The display area, where the latest weapons and equipment will be demonstrated and explained, will be open from 10:00

Armed Forces Day Saturday, having for its theme, Power for Peace, will honor our men in the various military services, not the least of which is the Army Reserves. On the Peninsula and for the county our local Army Ready Reserve Unit is the 6211th ARSU, a station complement whose initial duty would be the immediate assumption of operation and command of a post for an emergency. The 6211th is under the command of Col. Julian A. Walker of Monterey and has many Carmel members including Lt. Col. Robert P. Spencer, pictured above with Lt. Col. Luke Shields (left), as they study an aerial map while planning a field problem.

The photos were made by William Brooks, a Carmel member of the unit. Other Carmel members are: Arthur Hull, Orville Rogers, Paul Rice, Eugene Schaffer, Herb Blanks, Kirby Low, Thomas Griffin, Elliot Williams, Jack Laughlin, Abner Pickering, Norris Balsley, Donald Morton, William Gibson, Daniel Brosnan, Robert Masuen, William Powell, Samuel Robinson, and Arthur Bellick.

Tuesday Concert To Be Climax Of Symphony Season

Members of the Board of The Monterey County Symphony Orchestra and others who have been attending the rehearsals under Conductor Millar, are enthusiastic with preparations for the final concert of the season at Sunset Auditorium on Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. The Second Rachmaninoff Concerto will be played by Sylvia Jenkins Nordby, brilliant young pianist living at present in Carmel. Four soloists of the orchestra will be heard in all three movements of the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante in E flat. They are Raymond Duste, oboe; William Klinger, clarinet; Joseph Axup, horn; and Don Knuth, bassoon. Adagio from Toccata and Fugue and the Chorale-Prelude on Martin Luther's hymn "We all believe in One God"—Bach-Stokowski, will be played. A suite from Kodaly's Comic Opera, Hary Janos, will supply the lighter side of the program.

Professional players have loyally given their services, and will be joined by several more from San Francisco for the Concert, which promises to be high-light climax of the season.

CARMEL HIGH SWIMMERS IN NCS COMPETITION SATURDAY
Coach Chuck Moody's Carmel High tankmen will travel to Santa Clara High School early Saturday morning for a try at some of the nifty medals which go to the lucky ones who place in the North Coast Section swimming finals. This meet always attracts the best swimmers in Northern California and there is torrid competition for the six places in each event. The lightly-manned Carmel squad has enjoyed good success in all the meets so far this season and should gain some great experience competing against the best of the North Coast preps.

Don Smith, undefeated lightweight backstroke star, appears to have the best chance to pick up points for the Padre limiteds, but he should receive good help from Bob Durbrow, breaststroke specialist; Charles Baird, 75-yard medley point-getter; Mark Hildebrand, 100-yard freestyle and relay performer; and Bob Leidig, 50-yard freestyle and relay. The Carmel heavyweights will splash with John Thompson, a good 200-yard freestyler; Brayton Witherell, 100-yard freestyle and relay; Jim Hicks, sprint star; and Pat Erwin, a relay specialist.

DON PETTY SEEKS NORTH COAST SHOT-PUTT RECORD

Don Petty, Carmel High's only qualifier for the North Coast Section Track Meet at Berkeley Saturday, has a fine chance to set a new NCS record in the lightweight 8-pound shot-putt. The muscular little shot-putter has bettered the present record several times in section meets on his way to qualifying for this Saturday's big one, and, if conditions are right, could hit over 60 feet at the University of California track stadium. In the subsection meet at Stanford last Saturday, Petty lacked a few inches of hitting 59 feet and actually reached better than 60 feet in a practice toss. Most severe competition for Dynamic Don will come from a lightweight in his own league, Humboldt High's Medina, who has a best of over 59 feet.

PHILLIPS BEST DRIVER

Deane Phillips of the Carmel Continentals placed highest in the Monterey Junior Chamber of Commerce driving tests held Saturday. He scored 314 out of a possible 400 points to win over the 18 other contestants. The trial was a series of obstacles set up to simulate driving problems and through which the boys piloted their cars. Greg Danelz of Carmel placed fourth in the same event.

PINE CONE SOFTBALL TEAM IN PG TOURNAMENT

Manager Joe Nicholson's classy Pine Cone softball squad will see action in the Pacific Grove Invitational Tournament which is being held this week. The Coners are considered one of the top teams in the tournament, having been given top seeding along with Santa Cruz. Following their tournament play at Pacific Grove, the Pine Cone will take on a series of free lance games, meeting some of the best teams in Northern California at Sunset School field.

The Pine Cone won from the PG Rec Club by the score of 3-1 last night in the first game and are to play again Friday at 7:30. Fans who have followed the Coners in recent years will recognize most of the players wearing the brown and green spangles. Ace pitcher, Jim Morton, will handle the bulk of the pitching chores with help from the old master, Ky Miyamoto. The Peninsula's top keystone combination, Gene Vandervort and Walt Frey, will again cavort at shortstop and second base. Bill Conlan and Don Canham will divide the catching duties and double as outfielders when not behind the mask. Dick Weer, speedy flychaser, will again patrol center field and will be flanked by Bob Bell and Phil Ramirez, outfield and pitching.

CARMEL SOFTBALL TEAM MAKES GOOD SHOWING

Jack Giles, Carmel's veteran softball mentor, rounded up a gang of Carmel sprouts who like to play softball, whipped them into good shape, gave them a few lessons in the fine art of the game, and turned them loose in the popular Castroville Tournament last Saturday. The Carmel lads did a bit of all right in the tourney too, winning enough games to get in the finals and just barely getting edged by the good Hall Elementary School in the final game. On their way to the tournament finals, the Carmel gang defeated the tough Castroville aggregation, 6 to 4, and upset Spreckels, 7 to 5. Toby Edson and Phil White pitched the wins and showed plenty of stuff to baffle the valley hitters. Mike Mitchell, Walt Helm, David Hansen, Russ Wise, Frank Wallace, Pio Junco, Jim Edwards, Mike Taylor, and Bill Harder rounded out the team which made such a big hit at Castroville's softball classic.

Gilroy	3	3
Live Oak	3	3
King City	3	3
Hollister	2	4
Gonzales	1	5

Carmel High's baseball team handed Pacific Grove an undisputed B league championship Monday afternoon as they blew a 10-3 decision to the Gilroy Mustangs in a make-up game which was rained-out earlier in the season. Tied with the Breakers before Monday's clash with Gilroy, the Padres needed a win to share the title but couldn't overcome 9 glaring errors and the terrific Gilroy batting power.

Gilroy went to work on the Padres in the first canto, shoving across a run on a pair of Carmel errors. Dick Jennings, Carmel hurler, stayed out of trouble in the second heat although the Padres were guilty of two more errors. However, a pickoff play at second base worked successfully and Gilroy failed to score. The roof fell in on the chunky right-hander in the third frame as Gilroy's Bob Mazzuca hit a booming home-run with two runners aboard. Things were no better for reliever Bill Powell in the fourth inning as the visitors got an even half-dozen on five Padre errors and six hits.

Carmel got on the board in the fifth inning when clean singles by West Whittaker and Bob Michela followed walks to Paul Fratessa, Chuck Solomon, and Bill McCormack. Whittaker was the leading Padre sticker, collecting a pair of singles in four trips to the plate. Short score:

HOLMAN'S DEPT. STORE—Pacific Grove

Thanks to fast communication made possible by the modern mobile telephone, our service men and their equipment can be where needed, fast. All that is necessary to get our men on the job in a hurry is a telephone call. The dispatcher who receives the call, immediately contacts the service man in the field nearest the trouble spot by radio-telephone and work begins almost at once.

Besides helping to clear trouble fast, the modern miracle of the moving telephone also reduces the cost of operation by saving work time and equipment use. In order to give the best possible service at the lowest possible cost we are constantly on the lookout for more efficient and more economical ways to perform each daily task.

2nd Anl. Williams-Lofton Death Valley Expedition, Official Report, Part 2

BY NANCY LOFTON

In the morning it was as we had remembered. Ground covered with needles from the tamarisk trees. Round pool of water in which the painted mountains were mirrored as the sun rose. Flocks of doves and blackbirds, ducks and white herons about the marsh edges. Wild horses out on the desert with their ears alert to discover the invaders of their watering place. A few old fence lines and mounds of white borax balls among the marsh plants, left from the short-lived efforts of Charles Daunet to make a fortune from the desert's borax.

Next day we set off to explore Hanaupah Canyon while Dick painted the desert. Wild burros thrived in Hanaupah we had heard, along with wild grapevines and rushing mountain streams.

Up the alluvial fan we wound, past an old fault scarp made by an uneasy movement of the earth in 1872, then down into the canyon cut through the alluvial fan by the force of vanished water. Russell deduced that the same earthquake which caused the fault scarp had changed the elevation of the fan, making the water change its course and cut through the mass of debris it had built up previously.

The road wound around giant rocks in the dry stream bed, under great cliffs twisted and layered and shattered in rose and red, brown and gray. The changing light on the canyon walls made a kaleidoscope of color and form as first one rock face, then another, caught sunlight and shadow. Suddenly there was running water in the stream bed. Every foot we advanced up the canyon toward the base of Telescope Peak the stream grew larger. Birds appeared. The bushes were bigger. Grass grew beside the road or stream bed. Around a canyon corner the wild jackasses stood. There was a whole herd of them, complete with a large white-speckled leader who brayed in derision at us and a small black baby burro who looked like a child's wind-up toy. The wild grape vines were there, too.

Next day we went up Hanaupah again. Dick set up his easel, steadied by tent pegs firmly driven into the ground, while the rest of us prowled, picking over the inexhaustible treasure house of the desert. We found horned toads and fine specimens of copper ore, beautiful bits of old ruby glass and pieces of talc, a handsome old pot-bellied stove, two deserted beds, seven fairly new comic books, botany specimens to collect, rock specimens to chip, pools of clear water to wash our feet and a sheltered place for tea.

Coming back down the canyon in the late afternoon, we found Indian pictographs on a rock wall, lively figures of men and wild sheep drawn in red pigment made from the canyon's rocks.

The wind had been increasing in vehemence and that night in camp was as noisy as a New York subway. We began to feel Djinn-haunted. The night was full of voices and the firelight on the trees just barely revealed the outlines of an encroaching Djinn moving in on us from the desert outside.

Not too slow to take a hint, we blew up the valley next morning, the wind howling behind us. Mid-afternoon found us at Ubehebe Crater, a highly satisfactory dead volcano, where all the winds left over from the rest of the world were having a blowing contest. It was an impressive sight, on so large a scale that our sense of proportion was confused. The wind confused us too, so on we went, looking for a canyon where cottonwood trees grew.

This Cottonwood Canyon we had heard about and in the process of looking for it we found fossils, rocks, stones that walked, abandoned mines, mysterious circles, islands in dry lakes and other inexplicable phenomenon.

Down through banded rose and gray-brown mountains we followed the road southwest from Ubehebe Crater, still looking for that peaceful canyon with a running stream laced with cottonwood trees. Stopping for lunch beside the road we discovered that the rocks which lined the road were marked by fossil outlines of shells and corals. Dick was as much excited by his discovery of a real trilobite as he would have been by the discovery of a gold mine. That's one trouble with the desert. You feel that every rock you don't turn over hides some treasure. As a result, wherever we stopped we all immediately set about turning over rocks.

Our road led down a stream bed where giant boulders had been pushed aside to make the way. We came at last down a sloping valley at the foot of which lay a round white dry lake bed with a mass of granite rocks sticking up near its center, like nothing so much as Boecklin's Isle of the Dead. This was Racetrack. We had read that stones on the surface of this dry lake bed moved about mysteriously, leaving behind them clear marks of their passing. Driving out on the flat, pale cream surface we set out in search of these peripatetic boulders. The Djinn-wind was still blowing about us. The sky was darkening. A few drops of rain were falling. It was getting colder and colder and none of us would have been surprised to see a dinosaur waddling out of the mountains. Cruising about on the lake bed was a curious experience. There were the rocks, some of them must have weighed nearly a quarter of a ton, and clearly marked behind each one was a long straight track where it had moved over the mud. If the wind had moved them, why did they all go in different directions? There seemed to be no specific direction or distance in which they moved. They simply were there, sitting on the lake bed, and they obviously had moved when the lake bed was slightly damp. There was one long track, stone wide, with a rock at each end. Even more unaccountable was a perfect circle we found on the lake bed, 35 feet in diameter. No beginning, no end, just a track six inches wide that formed a perfect circle. There was no accounting for any of Racetrack. On the shore of the lake we found a cabin, burned down sometime in the past few years, with children's toys scattered on the ground about it. Beyond it in the base of the mountains we found rusted rails and ore cars, buckets and picks. It was not impossible that the mother of that family had burned the cabin down herself to persuade her husband that this was no place to live. The wind was rising until the fine sand of the lake bed seeped into every pore. The wind was cold and wet and loud and we went to the granite island to make our camp, surrounded by a real howling wilderness.

We began to feel we were the last people alive on the planet and made our beds accordingly. Missy took one look at the situation and said, "Thank you, but I'll sleep in the station wagon." She made herself a very comfortable bed there while the rest of us crawled into our sleeping bags on top of the red canvas sail, which we then curled up over our heads to keep out the blowing sand. Sometimes before dawn we were roused by rain, glad in a way that it wasn't the end of the world, which was what you might expect in such a place. Somehow the red sail got from underneath us to cover us and we slept again.

The next morning the desert greeted us with calm. Our Djinn company had gone and there was stillness. In the quiet morning light Dick set up his easel and stopped painting only to eat until we left Racetrack. For two days he painted without stopping, working on the great masses of the mountains and the stillness of the lake plain, ending with a small quiet, serene canvas. I say canvas, but actually he was painting on canvas, box tops, doors, and sundried boards. The 13 stretched canvases he had brought with us had been used and the painting fever was on him. Scouring the desert we found an old door which made two good panels when sawed in half and the beautifully made top to the box which perched on the roof of the car made a solid ground for a magnificent picture

Bay School Invites You To Its Festival Saturday At Noon

We like Bay School very much. We hope you can come to our festival.

Tess Read, Grade 1.

This might be the last year at Bay School. We hope that you can come and see Bay School.

Jeannette Bridges, Grade 2.

We want every person to come to our May Festival because they could see it while it is still running. We are going to have songs, dances and games.

Mike Whitehead, Grade 2. We would like to have more second and third graders to live in the Highlands. We have a very nice playground. I hope you come to our festival.

Cynthia Self, Grade 3. We want you to come to the Bay school festival. We will serve lunch.

Jerry Zellhoefer, Grade 3. The festival begins at 12:00. We are having games, dances and lunch. Bring 50 cents.

Billy Lawson, Grade 3. Little historic Bay School has only 12 students, and only one room. One of the teachers was Julia Breinig who taught in the 1920's. Bay School was built in 1879.

Shelley Waddington, Grade 3. There will be a white elephant sale and a fish pond. Lunch will be at 12:00, cost of lunch, 50 cents to adults, 35 cents to children. We hope you can come so you can see Bay School. It might close down because there are not enough children in first, second and third grades.

Janice Bridges, 4th Grade. I have been at Bay School for four years. It has been a wonderful experience for me. I have enjoyed every bit of it. Once a year we have a May Festival. It is full of fun. We have singing, dancing, lunch and sales. This year the fourth and third grades have been taking Spanish. We are going to sing you some songs in Spanish. Natalie Mary Doner, Grade 4.

I am new in Bay School. I find Bay School has a nice assortment of books to read. The teacher is the best I ever had. The children have been very nice to me.

Sharon Kay Lawson, Grade 4. I have been at Bay School for three years. I have had a lovely time and a lovely teacher. For five years we have had a festival. We have first, second, third and fourth grades and one teacher.

Kathie Hellam, Grade 4. Little Bay School was built in 1879. It is one of the oldest schools in the county. It has one room but we like it very much. Bay school is found near the mouth of the San Jose Creek.

Margaret H. Williams, Grade 4.

New Shop Featuring Handmade Gloves in Der Ling Court

The Der Ling court on Ocean Avenue harbors Carmel's newest shop, Vera-Vogue Originals, featuring handmade gloves. The John Guttmanns are the owners of the shop and design the original models which are on display. There are 500 different styles from which to choose, jeweled gloves, two-tone gloves, flowered gloves, initialed gloves, long gloves, short gloves, all different colors of gloves and a large assortment of leathers.

Mr. and Mrs. Guttmann had been in the glove business in Chicago for nine years and on one of their frequent trips to California discovered Carmel and decided they could carry on a wholesale glove business here just as well as in the East. So! for the past month they have been settling in Carmel and arranging their new shop.

school houses. The request of the parent nursery school, which has outgrown its quarters at the Youth Center in Carmel, will also be presented to the school board at its meeting Wednesday and if granted, would solve the problem of keeping Bay in operation at little cost to the school district, and may satisfy the Highlanders who want to keep Bay open for sentimental reasons, but will not console the Highlands parents whose children have been receiving individual instruction on a private school level because of the smallness of the classes and the excellence of the teacher at Bay.

Letters To The Editor

To The City Council:

The only fair and decent way to settle the parking problem is for those who use the facilities and those who benefit from them to pay the cost. It is not fair to levy on the residents either a general property tax, however small, or a sales tax in order to furnish easy, painless parking for a part of the population, the owners of cars. That is discrimination in bestowing favors upon the more fortunate residents and visitors.

The logical answer is parking meters; cities which use them find them doubly desirable, as they furnish a profit with which to purchase space for additional parking. By this means it might, in time, be possible to eliminate the meters. Or the funds could be used to employ needed traffic officers. Those persons who wish to have all-day street parking "for free," of course will oppose the meters, and, if possible, will induce you, the Council, to find other and, to them, painless means of financing the parking. What about the pain to those who do not use or benefit from parking, involved in the sales tax? Because it is spread out thinly over many persons, is it thereby justifiable?

If not meters, then a parking district including the business area, with sufficient assessments levied, would put the cost upon the persons who gain definite financial benefit from parking of cars. A fair-minded property owner would not add the whole cost to the rent charged the tenant, though the latter could well bear a part of the expense, as he also benefits from patrons who use the parking facilities. The establishment of out-of-town shopping areas with ample space for shoppers' cars is a distinct probability; furthermore, such areas usually furnish additional conveniences free, that cannot be found in the crowded business district. Evidence that it pays for stores to furnish parking space for their patrons is shown by the several stores in Carmel that for some years have done just that.

As to the marginal businesses that might be forced to close if they have to bear their share of the cost of parking accommodations, it is a question whether it is economically sound to require the public to aid such businesses to continue. If there is need or demand enough for their product or services, they will prosper, by the law of supply and demand if they are reasonably efficient. If not, they should be allowed to close and go elsewhere. Their going would really improve the general economic situation. To force the shopping public to subsidize inefficient business methods or the parking needs of owners of automobiles is manifestly unfair.

Respectfully,
L. Lucile Turner

and Spanish, the five official U.N. languages. It is a three-center.

MADONNA FESTIVAL SLIDE-SHOW AT WAYFARER

Pictures, in color, of the Madonna Festival at the Wilshire Methodist Church in Los Angeles will be shown on Tuesday evening at 8:00 o'clock in the lounge of the Church of the Wayfarer. The festival, now an established institution for artists and craftsmen, has just closed in Los Angeles, and these pictures will be shown by Glenn Turner, the director of the event, who will also speak briefly on the festival. Carmel artists, including Leslie Emery, Linford Donovan, and Nell Walker Warner had pictures in this year's show. The program is open to the public without admission charge or offering.

Conservation On The March

A Weekly Column by
C. Edward Graves
Western Representative,
National Parks Association

Growing bananas in North Dakota might seem at first thought to have little connection with conservation. It would be a ridiculous project, of course, but it can be done if enough money is spent on building hot-houses and operating them. Senator Douglas of Illinois, chief opponent in the Senate of uneconomical reclamation and engineering projects, used this illustration recently in speaking of the Colorado River Storage Project.

One of the chief arguments in favor of the project has been that it would cause a boom in the local economy of the Upper Colorado River states, and that this would in turn bring more taxes into the U. S. Treasury. Senator Douglas neatly punctured this false argument in his Senate speech on April 18. He said, as reported in the Congressional Record:

"Think of the employment that would be created in North Dakota if Congress decided as a public project to grow bananas in the wintertime, and thus alleviate the shortage of fruit. Prosperity would bloom throughout the northern area. But someone else would have to pay the bill."

The last sentence should be in bold print. The point has been well made, not only by Senator Douglas but also by Prof. Paul Sears of Yale University, described by Senator Douglas as "the greatest authority on the geography of the country", and also head of the Yale Conservation School, that the most economical method of increasing farm production in the country is to put more water on the fertile sections where the cost would be much less. Water, they say, taken from the Mississippi or the Great Lakes, would greatly increase farm yields in Minnesota, Iowa, Ohio and Illinois. The cost would be somewhere between $30 and $60 an acre, as against $800 an acre for the Upper Colorado lands. That is a figure that eastern taxpayers can hardly ignore.

Echo Park Dam and Glen Canyon Dam, the two main dams in the Upper Colorado Project, are not in themselves irrigation dams. Their most ardent promoters admit that fact. They go on to state, however, that power generated at the dam sites will make enough profit in 50 years to pay the cost of the dams, and from that point on the profits can be used to build irrigation projects.

They also admit that hay for livestock would be the principal crop grown, since the elevation of the farm lands is so high. Thoughtful people in the East are beginning to ask, why should we pay taxes for such a project any more than for banana raising in North Dakota? Wouldn't it be much better to tax ourselves less and increase the yields of fertile lands in our section of the country? Or, perhaps, why should we tax ourselves at all, since the country is already paying $800,000 a day for storage for surplus farm products?

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

Everyone seems to enjoy reading biography, perhaps because the story is true and shines with a polish of reality. Several biographies are included among the new books at the library.

Memories, by Ethel Barrymore, is the warmly human story of a famous actress who grew up in the atmosphere of the theater, with never a question as to what career to pursue. The stage was the thing. Success was a foregone conclusion.

Emily Dickinson's Home, by Millicent Todd Bingham, gives us the intimate home life of the Dickinson family. This book follows her earlier one entitled Ancestor's Brocades.

Onions in the Stew, by Betty MacDonald, is not classed as biography, but is decidedly autobiographical in feeling. Written with her characteristic verve and gay good humor, it recounts the MacDonald family's eventful life on an island off the northwest coast. We are piling up a long list of readers on this one, but a second copy will come as a Book of the Month in June, and will relieve the congestion somewhat.

Victor Herbert, by Edward Waters, traces the life of the great composer, outlining his many musical facets, and delineating his prolific musical output.

Other interesting books newly added include Wheels West, by Homer Croy, which follows the story of the tragic Donner party. Relax and See, by Clara Hackett, gives rules and procedures for improving eyesight through daily eye exercises. The Growing Family, by Maxwell Stewart, deals progressively with the problems of child raising from birth to teenage. The whole thing makes enjoyable reading because of the author's kindly style.

Seniors Make Plans For Their Week

A committee, headed by Priscilla Clark, is busy planning the details of Senior Week at Carmel High School. The dates chosen by the students are May 31 to June 3. Tuesday will be Senior Teaching Day when the seniors actually take over the teaching duties in the school. Wednesday there will be a special Senior luncheon in the cafeteria and in the evening a Girls' Athletic Association award banquet. Thursday the Seniors will hold their annual picnic and the week will be climaxed by Friday's Senior Dress-up Day when the prospective graduates appear at classes in fantastic disguises and costumes. The following week will be Dead Week and the seniors will settle down to a long week of intensive study and instruction for finals to be held from June 13 to 16. Graduation will be on June 17.

CARMEL CAMERA

By Candida

At Symphony rehearsal Monday night, board member MacMillan Kerr (conductor of Moss Landing's Kaiser Magnesia plant) smilingly playing a huge dish towel over one of the voluminous aluminum (Kaiser's?) cooking vessels at the Carmel High School cafeteria after the orchestra's cider and coffee break. . . . Statuesque Highlander, Mrs. Laidlaw Williams, bent low over the necessarily deep cafeteria sink, elbow deep in teacups, but beaming up through the steam. . . . Two of Music's best friends, Mimi Klene and Ruth Cooke, having a consultation (musical) with fellow "boarder" Dr. Walter Lehmann, former court physician to Albania's banished King Zog.

Ever-chic Mimi Klene (ex-dude rancher and ex-Marshall Field decorator of the Great Southwest) has her brown Guatemalan-embroidered back to the camera. The Klens now live right up in our valley, and Mimi devotes much of her vast reserve of unreleased energy to matters musical. That Midas-touched-Titian hair of Ruth's casts a familiar glow in practically nine out of ten concert audiences, both here and in San Francisco. . . . A panel of striking heads around the libation table belonging, left to right, to Symphony Association President Fritz Wurzmann, board member Wallace Doolittle (MC-ing the coffee urn) and ditto dark-braided Marjory (Mrs. Frank) Lloyd, whose equally decorative, now distant daughter, Jennefer, was formerly one of the orchestra's ornaments, with considerable power over a bass viol. . . .

The delightful-to-look-at Brad Buckminsters, one of the three espoused pairs of players, in a lively, cookie-punctuated causerie with cellist Dorothy Pasmore Bell of Soquel and Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians (American Supplement). . . . Flowerlike Sylvia Jenkins Nordby, seasoned soloist for the May 24th concert at Sunset Auditorium, at the piano, her pale hands deftly weaving the spell of the darkly-rapturous Rachmaninoff Second (Brief Encounter) Concerto. Her dark shoulder-length bob is temporarily pinned back from a petal-white profile that is a study of serenity-in-action. Her husband, Edward Nordby, a Language School student, is acting as page boy. . . . Here is this high-powered flower again an hour and a half later, still unwilted, still swaying gently on her slim but steely stem, still sustaining that scintillating and singing tone in spite of the innumerable playbacks necessary to attain rapport with the other sixty-four. (Sylvia has thrice provided ivory inlays for the San Francisco Symphony.) . . .

Conductor Gregory Millar, mouth ajar, eyes afire, baton in air with one arm extended imploringly to the cellos, illustratively (and characteristically) belting out the melodic line in such a stirring tenor that everyone wishes the composer had written it in. Take a good look, for this Wagnerian version of Tyrone Power will soon be familiar to TV viewers from here to Florida, what with the Ford Foundation planning to kinescope current TV broadcasts of his Little Symphony of San Francisco. . . . Here is another shot of our Millarvelous maestro, caught on the upswing of one of his quickening beats, upon whose anvil our orchestra, in a few short months has gone far toward being shaped into that pattern-for-the-

Alma M. Gledhill

Funeral services were held on Monday for Alma Marie Gledhill, wife of Joseph H. Gledhill of Carmel. Mrs. Gledhill had been in ill health for some time and her death occurred on Friday morning at her home in Hatton Fields.

She was a member of the Monterey chapter of the Soroptimist Club and an active member of the Carmel American Legion Auxiliary Post, No. 512. Before her illness she was associated with her husband in a radio and household appliance business on San Carlos Street.

Prior to coming to Carmel, 17 years ago, she and her husband lived in San Jose and Mountain View. Her native state was Oregon where she was born in Butteville on November 9, 1897.

Those surviving besides her husband, are three brothers, Otto, Herbert and Ernest Sunberg of Portland, Oregon, and two sisters, Mrs. Alice Tees of Portland and Mrs. Olga Neel of Tigard, Oregon.

The Star Spangled Banner

By GAIL MACKENZIE,
Freshman, Carmel High School, Second Prize
Winner in Group 2, American Legion
Auxiliary Essay Contest

The crowd in the stadium rose to its feet. With the first few chords of music, the voices swelled to sonorous tones, and the grey walls echoed back the vibrations. Lips belonging to different creeds uttered the words as one. Eyes of contrasting shapes searched together the flowing form of the flag, arched high against the crisp blue of day. Varied accents blended into one voice. "Oh! say can you see by the dawn's early light, what so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming." These were Americans, joined together by a song. It didn't matter that the man next to you was an immigrant, residing in this country only six months. He sang just as loudly as anyone else, and even if he couldn't understand all the words, he could grasp the feeling behind them. The music stopped, but the song lived on, just as it has all these years.

Frances Scott Key wrote the Star Spangled Banner as a wish, "O! long may it wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave," and that wish is still in the heart of every American. Yet, no nation was made great because its citizens wished it to be great. The fight of Fort McHenry is now the subtle, verbal war of communism versus Democracy, and our tools must be sharper than ever to meet this challenge. We must alter this wish into a promise. We must make it a promise that our flag "will still be there," and that what the flag symbolizes is what we, ourselves believe in. By insuring and maintaining our liberties through our foresightedness and sensitiveness to national and international affairs, we can consecrate what our forefathers fought for and prove that their struggles were not futile. By preserving the faith of our country in American Democracy, and by upholding our ideals through our active citizenship, we can lay a firm foundation for the generations ahead of us. With the background of sturdy leadership, and the advantages of freedom, it is now our responsibility to build America so invincibly that, through the chasms of time, it will still stand as the foundation of our faith.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

By JAMES EDWARDS,
Sixth Grade, Junipero Serra School,
Second Prize Winner in Group 1
Washington was a brave and hard fighting man. Though he was defeated many times, he always had the courage to come back and win. For instance, when Cornwallis' troops took New York, Washington defeated the British in two surprise attacks at Princeton and Trenton.

George Washington, a Virginian, was chairman of the Constitutional Convention in the year 1787. He was one of the founders and strong supporters of the Federalist Party, which compares in a great many ways to our present Republican party. The Federalists believed in: The country's leaders should be among the wealthy, educated people; the importance of a strong judiciary; the value of a strong military.

A leader in war and peace, Washington was unanimously elected President. His chief cabinet members were Thomas Jefferson, secretary of state, Alexander Hamilton, secretary of the treasury who founded the first National Bank, and John Jay, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. All of these men are famous statesmen.

Among his many duties Washington was a successful farmer; in fact he was the first American to raise mules. He also raised tobacco, sheep and other crops. People say he was the agriculturist of his time.

Another accomplishment of his was a small factory where carding, weaving and spinning of wool, linen and cotton was done. This made

A stranger with a mind so like my own
That living is become complexity
Of what is heart, or what is flesh and bone.
This is a stranger's face. A post war mask
Of what was I. His was an artist's touch
That moulded brow and chin. I could not ask
Another surgeon's hands to do as much.
This is a stranger's face, and I within
Must learn to think, to love, to speak, to live

One Nation Under God

By JOAN HAMILTON,
Junior, Carmel High School, Group 3, Second
Prize Winner, American Legion Auxiliary
Americanism Contest

Several hundred years ago a group of people stepped on a small rock on the New England coast, thereby hoeing the furrow in which the seed of our democracy was to be sown. That seed of democracy was formed and nurtured in the hearts of men. These men had been forced to conceal this seed while they had suffered the religious and political intolerances and persecutions of the Old World. When our forefathers cast these seeds on our barren Atlantic coast, only God knew whether they had found a place to send out roots and to grow in peace. Each leaf, each stem and each root was symbolic of the injustices in the world; the injustices our forefathers had endured and which they hoped would not exist in this new nation, this "Nation under God". Yet these people were not so blinded by their new-found freedom as to believe that this New World would ever remain or even become a Utopia. To their foresight and intelligence we owe our unparalleled government. Our government and our nation were built on the foundation of the rights of the common man. Consequently, we are always striving to eliminate any fallacies which would endanger these rights.

I wonder whether mere flesh and blood alone could build a nation so strong. The Pilgrims didn't think so, nor did our other "nation builders." Throughout the years we have acknowledged the Divine Providence from the first Thanksgiving of the Pilgrims to our present day addresses by our President and his associates.

The problem now facing us, especially the members of the younger generation, is whether this nation will remain a nation under God. Because of the increasing complexity of our society, will we be forced to give up this cornerstone of our governmental foundation?

I am an American and I am proud of being an American. The following situations speak louder for our way of life than any words I could say:

A school child hurrying through the autumn leaves to catch a school bus, a bus which is filled with the sons of farmers, merchants, businessmen, laborers and immigrants.

A farmer gazing at his golden wheat fields, wheat which will be sold in an open market and the profit or loss of which will be received by the farmer.

The peaceful quiet of a university or college campus when classes are in session, colleges for all those who can prove themselves scholastically eligible.

A warm Sunday in early spring which is so quiet that you can hear the bells of the far off mission, the organ of the Episcopal Church and the voices of the choir from the community church. After their worship is completed these people return to their friends, among whom may be found a Jew, a Protestant, a Catholic or an Episcopalian. Truly we are "One nation under God."

These scenes seem to shout to the subjugated peoples of the world, "Look, this is a better way. Let us help you to have a better way of life." Without our basic ideal, faith in humanity and faith in God, we could hardly hope to accomplish anything of value in our seeding of democracy.

Some day, perhaps, the rest of the world will throw off the shackles of totalitarians; then we shall all join in a prayer for world peace. We can then become "One United World under God." Until this happens we must strive to reorganize and to instigate new governmental procedures, to protect our cherished heritage and to remain united at all costs, "One Nation under God," until world peace is achieved.

Karen Williams Plans Wedding

Next Monday at noon Karen Williams will become the bride of Edgar R. Bryant. This is the culmination of a romance which grew out of little theater activities in Carmel in which Karen and her future husband both are interested. Karen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Meade Williams of Carmel and her marriage will take place in the patio of their home with only family members and a few close friends present. Karen has spent most of her life in Carmel and is a graduate of Carmel High School. She attended the Pasadena Playhouse for two years and continued with theater work in New York before coming back to Carmel where she has been seen frequently in local productions. Her grandmother is Mrs. Jesse Lynch Williams of Carmel and her two uncles are Lyn and Laidlaw Williams.

Ed Bryant is the son of Mrs. Betty T. Bryant of Carmel and graduated from Stanford University. He and his bride plan to make their home in Carmel.

Among those who have entertained for the bride-to-be is Mrs. Brad Buckminster, who recently gave a lingerie shower for Karen at her home on Carmelo Street.

Lewis L. Fenton, Jr., Christened

On Sunday afternoon in All Saints' Church, Lewis Lowry Fenton, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lowry Fenton of Pebble Beach, was christened by the Reverend George Davidson, neighbor and old friend of the Lowrys, who had also officiated at their wedding. Godparents were Mrs. Julian P. Graham, J. Hampton Hoge and Edwin D. Jones, Jr.

The reception for family members following the ceremony was held at the home of the baby's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Claire V. Goodwin. Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Norman Fenton of Sacramento, paternal grandparents of young Lewis.

Masons to Confer Degree

The Carmel Masonic Lodge will confer first degrees tomorrow evening at 8:00 o'clock at the Masonic Temple. Refreshments will be served following the ceremony.

Senior Prom On Saturday

The Junior class at Carmel High School has been busy dyeing sheets, collecting fishnet and designing denizens of the deep and appropriate underwater fauna for the dance which they will give the Senior class on Saturday night in the school gymnasium. Underwater Fantasy is the name of the party and the dancers are to be made to feel as though they were moving on the ocean floor. Sandra Smith and Lynda Malis are in charge of the decorations with the whole Junior class helping, under the leadership of Cynthia Cox.

D.A.R. Elects Officers

The Daughters of the American Revolution met on Tuesday evening in the Aguajito home of Mrs. Orville H. Polk, who was hostess for the annual meeting and election of officers. Assisting her were Mrs. Walter Johnston, Miss Sue Estelle Tuck, Mrs. Eva P. Preston and Miss Genevieve Reed. Colored slides of an Indian school in South Dakota were shown during the evening and a moving picture, made by the Department of Justice, entitled Twentieth Century Pilgrim.

New officers for the coming year are Mrs. Frank E. LaCauza, regent; Mrs. Carl E. Menneken, vice-regent; Miss Sue Estelle Tuck, chaplain; Mrs. Lloyd Kindall, recording secretary; Mrs. George S. DeLorimier, treasurer; Miss Elizabeth Merrill, registrar and Mrs. Polk, historian.

Woman's Club Garden Section

Miss Philippine Creelius, the garden section chairman of the Carmel Woman's Club, announces the program for that section's last meeting to be held at the clubhouse on Monday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. Mrs. Beauford Fisher, who is a highly successful orchid grower, will show some of her plants to illustrate her talk on orchids and how to grow them in the home.

After the program there will be a tea honoring the 38 women who have joined the club since last June. This tea is planned by Misses Eva Dunbar and Mabel Steen. Those assisting them are Mrs. William Rose, Mrs. Violet Ballantyne, Mrs. Maude Sutherland, Mrs. Margaret Swain, and Mrs. C. W. Fonteneau. Dr. Zoe Johnston, president, and Mrs. Florence Elliott, membership chairman, will pour.

Audubon Officers Elected

The final regular meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society was held Sunday at the William Hatton ranch in Calera Canyon. Mrs. R. H. Wells, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the following slate which was unanimously elected: Dr. R. P. Parsons, president; Miss Florence Waller, secretary; Mrs. William Hatton, vice-president; Mrs. W. Canfield, corresponding secretary, and R. H. Wells, treasurer.

The summer field trips will be announced in the Pine Cone and the June issue of the Sanderling, the official club publication. Great appreciation for the work of the Sanderling editors, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson of Salinas, was expressed.

The first meeting of the 1955-56 season will be held September 2 in the Carmel High School Library.

Shower for Rita Bradburn

Saturday afternoon, Rita Bradburn, who will shortly be married to John Ruster of Carmel, was the guest of honor at a shower given by Lois Robinson, Marcia and Gay Kuster at the latter's home in Carmel Valley. A Chinese table laden with gifts surprised the bride-to-be and decorations were predominantly pink. Those who toasted the health and happiness of Mrs. Bradburn were Mrs. Robert Oberfohren, Mrs. Fritz Wurzmann, Mrs. Edgar Bissantz, Mrs. Richard Holt and Mrs. Sally Berg of Carmel; Mrs. Alexander Shaw of Boston, Mrs. John McCoy of Los Gatos, Mrs. Ernest Dawley, Mrs. Allen Miller, Mrs. George Corrigan, Mrs. Edgar Haber, Mrs. Parker Kimball, Mrs. Robert McGihon, Mrs. Dean Wolter, Wyndham Medcraft and Miss Jean Bradburn of Carmel Valley.

Haack Attends Egyptian Wedding

Roland Haack returned to Carmel a week ago after a most interesting three months spent in Africa and Europe. Two months guiding a tour through Africa concluded in Cairo. Here through his acquaintanceship with an Egyptian he was asked to attend the friend's wedding, a four-day affair. Scene for the nuptials was a large hall, decorated with tapestries and Oriental rugs. The first day the Moslem wedding took place and then for three successive evenings parties were held in the same hall. Haack missed the first night's festivities as his tour work kept him occupied, but the next night he was present when five Egyptian artists (emphasis on abdominal muscles) entertained the company on an improvised stage. Mr. Haack as an honored guest had the privilege of a front row seat. The next and last night was in extreme contrast being very solemn. Three Moslem priests intoned the Koran for several hours, a most impressive and beautiful ceremony, with the hall decorated in profusion with gorgeous flowers. The next month was spent by Mr. Haack in European countries where he was free from the responsibilities of the tour and could enjoy himself at leisure and increase his stock of photographic slides, which he brought back to Carmel as a record of his trip.

Branding on Oppenheimer Ranch

Last week neighbors and old cattle riders, such as Tom Hudson and Judge Ray Baugh, joined in the annual branding on the Rancho San Carlos in Carmel Valley. On Sunday the group met in the pasture called Anonymous and between the hard work periods had a luncheon served by Frank DeAmaral and Mrs. G. F. King, wife of the manager of the ranch. This is an annual co-operative work project for those who are interested and reminds one that California is still one of the great cattle areas of the world.

Week End in San Rafael

Carmelites who attended the houseparty given last week end in San Rafael by Dr. Jesse Carr were Dr. and Mrs. Carol McKenny, Mrs. Betty Carr and Mr. and Mrs. James Hatlo.

Susie Vial Celebrates

Eleven young friends helped Susie Vial celebrate her fifth birthday on Friday afternoon at a party given in the patio of the Herbert Vials' home on the Point. There was a peanut hunt and ice cream cones to delight the young guests who were Penny Smith, Mizzy Lewis, Susie Brown, Greta Mitchell, Lisa Craft, Lenci Short, Tony Bates, Helen Elston, Milfi Howell, Teryl McBride and Karen Jones.

Champagne for Jennie Keith

On Sunday evening, Jennie Keith Hill made her first official public appearance playing the piano for the Musical Art Club at the Monterey Peninsula College. To celebrate the event her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul K. Hill, invited a small group to drink her health in champagne at their home following the recital. Present to toast Jennie Keith were Mr. and Mrs. James Hopper, the former being Jennie's music teacher, her aunt, Ruth Cooke, and her brother, Bill.

Gilbert Hornung in Hawaii

Private Gilbert Hornung recently arrived in Hawaii where he is stationed with the 25th, or Tropic Lightning, Infantry Division. His wife, Helen, is living in Carmel while her husband is overseas.

Karen Engle in Hospital

Sometimes it is better to let a horse go the way it wishes. That is the conclusion of Karen Engle, who, this week is a patient in the Peninsula Hospital with a broken ankle. Last Sunday Karen dug her heels in the ground and tried to restrain her horse from wandering whither it willed, but the horse was the stronger, and in the ensuing battle Karen was unfortunate enough to injure herself.

Hayfords in South Seas

Three wonderful months in Fiji and Tahiti are being fully appreciated by Marie and Frank Hayford of Midland, Texas. Their letters to Frank's mother, Mrs. Ann S. Hayford of Carmel have been so exciting that she has taken armloads of books on the two places out of the library and between the letters and the books is vicariously experiencing all the delights of the trip. The couple travel by plane and spent some weeks in Fiji before flying on to Tahiti for a month. Here they were entertained by Mrs. James Norman Hall, wife of the writer, and daily landed fine marlin, went out in small boats to visit little native villages and announced that the only way they were able to leave to go back to Fiji was to order the hotel people to put them aboard the plane forcibly, if necessary. They were afraid they were so enamored of the south sea paradise that they would be unable to leave of their own volition.

The Farris Have Anniversary

Eighteen years of marriage goes on record as of last Saturday for Senator-elect and Mrs. Fred Farr. As the former was in Sacramento and could not be present for the occasion, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lofton and Dr. and Mrs. Russell Williams combined to give a dinner party for Mrs. Farr and her children, Sam, Francesca and Nancy, and also for Mrs. Farr's brother, Sam Haskins, who was visiting her from Los Angeles. After dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Dana of Palo Alto arrived with colored movies of the Folboat trip Dr. Williams and Mr. Dana made down the Rogue River last summer, and the guests were awed by the way these intrepid gentlemen shot the "white water", but even more impressive was their skill when the film was run backwards and without a glance behind them Williams and Dana soared up the rapids in graceful leaps.

English Visitor at Cunninghams

George Murray of London was here for three days last week, the guest of John and Patricia Cunningham. Mr. Murray was paying his first visit to the Peninsula but had heard a great deal about it as his wife is Ethel Murray who lived in Carmel prior to the last war. He had always wanted to visit Carmel and when business brought him to this country he at last was able to realize his dream, not only of seeing the country but playing golf on our local courses.

Mrs. Douglas Entertains

Last week end the Bohemian Club held their annual golf tournament at Pebble Beach with Frederick Crocker Whitman in charge. Among those entertaining guests for the affair was Mrs. Grace Parsons Douglas whose houseguests were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Janss, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Janss, Mr. and Mrs. Clair Peck, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. James Boswell, all from Southern California. Mrs. Boswell is the daughter of the Feg Murrays of Carmel Valley.

Mike Dormody is Petty Officer

Dr. and Mrs. Horace Dormody have received word that their son, Mike, has passed all his examinations in the Navy for petty officer, 1st class. He is stationed on the USS Coral Sea in the Mediterranean at present and is planning a tour of Spain on his next leave.

Yvonne Winslow to Return Home

Six months is a long time to be in a hospital and Mrs. Yvonne Winslow will be delighted to leave the Ross General Hospital at the beginning of June for her home in Berkeley. She will be joined by her son, Garth, shortly afterwards. He is attending Verde Valley School in Arizona where he has recently been re-elected head of his dormitory, is student council alternate and has made the Independent list twice this year because of his excellence in effort, achievement grades and citizenship. This summer he is planning to continue his study of German and Spanish so that he will be proficient in both languages when he goes to Europe next year.

Sascha Willcox Wins Scholarship

The Monterey Peninsula Soroptimist Club has chosen to give their annual scholarship in nursing to Sascha Willcox, graduating senior at Carmel High School. The $300 award will be presented at the May 31 luncheon meeting of the group when Sascha will be their guest of honor.

Spring Fashion Show

Members of the two evening sewing classes graduated by Mrs. Ventura Lucero at Monterey Peninsula College will model the clothes they have made during the year at a fashion show to be held on Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock in the student union. Buttons and Bows is the name chosen for the affair and it will include women's apparel, men's sport coats and children's clothing. The public is invited to be present and refreshments will be served.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON
The fact that lasting beauty is gained through spiritual understanding of God's radiance and strength will be stressed at Christian Science services Sunday.

The Lesson-Sermon entitled "Soul and Body" includes the following verse from the Bible (Psalms 96:6): "Honour and majesty are before him: strength and beauty are in his sanctuary."

Among the correlative passages to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be the following (247:10-12, 13-15): "Beauty, as well as truth, is eternal; but the beauty of material things passes away, fading and fleeting as mortal belief. . . . Immortality, exempt from age or decay, has a glory of its own,—the radiance of Soul."

The Golden Text is from Psalms (104:1): "Bless the Lord, O my soul. O Lord my God, thou art very great; thou art clothed with honour and majesty."

Robert Phillips will play the rare French viola da gamba in a Carl Cherry Foundation sponsored concert at the Golden Bough, 8:30 o'clock on May 26. The Pacific Grove boy has interested himself in study of ancient instruments, particularly the viola da gamba under Marshall Johnston, British authority. Though only 16, he has made concert appearances in Los Angeles with Frank K. Owen, harpsichordist, and with Owen Brady, master of the Baroque Organ.

In his Peninsula debut next Thursday he will share the program with John Hamilton, harpsichordist. The following rarely heard music of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries will be played by the talented young musicians:

Sonata in E Minor, Eccles; Selections, Rameau; Sonata in G Major, Bach; Suite II, d'Hervelois; Sonata in C Major, Torelli; Four Sonatas, Scarlatti; Sonata in C Major, Handel.

Wine-tasting at Lodge

Del Monte Lodge will be the setting for the benefit wine-tasting to be given on Sunday afternoon, 4:00 to 7:00 o'clock, by the three local chapters of the Children's Home Society. Hostesses are to be the presidents of the chapters, Mrs. Virgil Frizzell, Punch and Judy chapter; Mrs. Robert Kvenild, Littlebits, and Mrs. Charles Stanton, Mother Goose. Mrs. Warren Edwards, coordinating chairman for the units, is general chairman for the event. Assisting the hostesses will be Mrs. Robert McDonald, Mrs. Curtis Mitchell, Mrs. A. F. Kandler, Mrs. Arthur Benoit and Mrs. Clyde Young. A display of assorted tableware will be shown featuring casserole dishes and wine glasses and advice as to the use of wine in cooking will also be offered.

Connie Flavin Home

Mrs. Martin Flavin arrived in Carmel on Saturday after several months in Egypt, Greece, Italy and France. She flew home over the new Polar Route as did her husband a month ago. Flavia Flavin, who had been with Mrs. Flavin during the latter part of her European stay, is still in London and plans to remain in England for several months.

Dixons in Japan

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin B. Dixon, who are journeying about the world until next Christmas, are at present spending a month in Japan and plan to continue by boat to Africa. They report they are having a very interesting and pleasant time and will return to Carmel with many new ideas.

Medical Committee to Meet

On Sunday the regional committee for the West Coast Counties Medical and Surgical Institute will meet at La Playa Hotel with Dr. Charles A. Broadbuss of Carmel, director of postgraduate activities for the California Medical Association, to plan a conference to be held in Carmel next spring. California is divided into five divisions and this area falls in the West Coast counties division. In the past the meetings have been held in Santa Barbara but next year the group has decided to move to Carmel. General chairman of the region is Dr. Horace Coshaw of Carpinteria and local chairman is Dr. Allen W. Mitchell who will be assisted in planning the conference by the following local doctors: Dr. Clyn Smith, Dr. Chester Moore, Dr. A. F. Kandler, Dr. LeGrand Woolley and Dr. Walter Layton.

Each year one of the five medical schools in California is in charge of the meetings and the College of Medical Evangelists in Los Angeles will take over the proposed Carmel conference with Dr. Harold Walton in charge.

Plans Approved For New Unit At River

School board in special meeting last night approved plans of Elston and Cranston for a new four-class room unit at River School, south of and parallel to the existing unit. Its estimated construction cost will be $67,068, fees and insurance bringing the total to $74,584. Total area will be 7780 square feet.

Board Chairman J. O. Handley complimented Thomas Elston, the architect, on his economical planning, which has resulted in savings for the school district without loss of quality.

Superintendent Stuart Mitchell reported the resignation of Frons Thayer, kindergarten teacher at Woods School, who wishes to devote her time to writing children's fiction. The board approved the contract of her replacement, Mrs. Edna Mae Goines, who has been teaching for the past seven years in Hanford.

The following improvements were approved for Sunset field: screen for first base bleachers, new bulbs for night ball lights and removal of the old light poles.

Barbara Lynch Engaged

Pupils in Miss Barbara Lynch's Fourth Grade class at Sunset School are excited over the fact that their teacher has announced her engagement to Charles M. Miller III, student of Russian at the Army Language School at the Presidio. Wedding plans are dependent on the latter's release from the Army and in the meantime Miss Lynch has resigned from teaching to resume her studies in religious work.

Happenings at the Edwards

On Saturday Jimmy Edwards will be 13 years old and he has invited Michael Mitchell, Bobby Little, Joan Dennehy and his sister, Lyn, to a swimming party at the Rancho Del Monte followed by a barbecue at the valley home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Edwards. Over the Decoration Day week end Mrs. Edwards is expecting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Cooper of Los Angeles to visit her.

Washington was a truly great man in every sense of the word. Though very wealthy he suffered with the common soldier in battle. He led our country wisely, and laid a good foundation for our government. He believed in progress and pioneered in the fields of manufacturing and farming.

He was a cultured, gracious gentleman who intelligently practiced what he preached.

2nd Williams-Lofton Death Valley Trek, Official Report, Part 2

While he painted the rest of the expedition scoured the country for water, explored old mines, wandered through canyon roads looking for a mythical settlement called Goldbelt, read, collected rocks and hunted horned toads. We found one spring, some miles from camp, but more by following wild jackass trails than the misleading desert signposts. We found one horned toad, but let him loose when Missy thought he'd miss his mother. We found one bird, who had certainly wandered into the island by mistake, and a wonderful stillness and quiet when for almost a whole day the wind did not speak and the sun did shine. Our last night on the desert was full of stars and our last dawn brought light that slowly poured down the eastern faces of our mountains until the whole valley cup in which we lay was full of brightness.

Suddenly it was time to go and we went. Out through rough mining roads, into the Saline Valley, through most beautiful high desert country, then down into the Central Valley and finally home where all the greenness seemed most very green and the sea was a familiar voice again.

PRESBYTERIANS TO OBSERVE ARMED FORCES SUNDAY

The Carmel Presbyterian Church will observe Armed Forces Sunday at the morning church service at 11:00 o'clock on May 22.

Jimmy Griffin will sing America, The Beautiful. Other hymns during the service will be chosen from that portion of The Hymnal dedicated to Christian Patriotism.

At the morning service announcements will be made of the progress in the building of the new church at Mountain View and Junipero in Carmel, and of the receipt of additional gifts for the furnishings fund.

Dr. Harry Clayton Rogers, pastor, will have as his sermon for the morning A Tribute To Those Who Have Helped Others To Know God.

Army, Navy, Coast Guard All Set For Armed Forces Day

(Continued from Page One) in the morning to 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon, and for those who find themselves looking at a piece of ordnance at one end of the post when the baseball game is getting underway at the other, will be able to catch one of the busses which will be cruising around to shuttle the restless from event to event.

At the Naval Postgraduate School open house will be held on Saturday between 10:00 and 5:00 o'clock. Scientific exhibits and demonstrations reflecting post-graduate school activities will be on display in the main engineering building, library and several of the laboratories. Members of the faculty, military staff and officer students will be present to answer questions and explain the experiments.

The demonstrations will include the Van De Graff Generator, the Wilson Cloud chamber, the Geiger counter and Neutron activation of silver. Spectacular demonstrations in electricity, electronics, metallurgy and chemistry have been especially prepared for the youngsters of the peninsula. Weather balloons carrying instruments will be an outdoor attraction and aviation enthusiasts may see models of aircraft carriers, cutaway jet engines, pulse jet engines, and smoke and wind tunnels.

Those who understand or wish to be abashed by mathematics may see the electronic digital computer and the analog computers in action. (These mechanical geniuses were "interviewed" by Nancy Lofton for the Pine Cone, issue of March 3, 1955.)

The Naval Auxiliary Air Station will hold its open house on Friday, starting at 1:00 o'clock, the program to include colorful fire-fighting demonstrations with asbestos clad Navy smoke-eaters fighting a blazing fuselage at 1:00 and 2:00 o'clock.

The Army Language school will be host to peninsula students and educators and show a documentary film, The Big Picture.

The Coast Guard Station will hold open house for the public Friday, Saturday and Sunday, according to Chief Warrant Officer Kurt Sprenger, and although the Active may not be in port an 83 foot patrol boat will be on display. During the three days visitors will be welcomed at Point Pinos Lighthouse.

Static exhibits of the Civil Air Patrol and the Ground Observers Corps will be at the Fort Ord display area.

No military personnel will take part in the parade which is to start at Lighthouse and Irwin streets in Monterey at 2:00 o'clock on Sunday and proceed through the center of town to the Monterey USO. Those participating will be veteran's organizations, school bands, both local and from the Bay area, Watsonville and Hollister; drum and bugle corps, and various other organizations which will be assembled by Chester Stalter who is in charge of proceedings.

Putnam Chairman Of Planning Commission

A public hearing on the Red Cross' request for a lot-swap use permit was set for Wednesday at 4:00 o'clock at yesterday's meeting of the Carmel Planning Commission.

The Red Cross executive committee has an offer to sell the house on their lot at Dolores and Eighth Streets for which they have a use permit to build a work room. They own the adjacent lot and have asked the planning commission to grant them a use permit to build their work room on this. Presumably, if the request is granted, the original use permit will be withdrawn as in the case of the lot-swap for the New Presbyterian Church.

The meeting opened with the welcoming of new commission member Herbert Blanks, appointed to replace Chairman Keith Evans, who had resigned. Frank Putnam was elected chairman.

Commission Members Dora Comstock and Gladys Kiplinger, reported that they had made a voluntary survey of the residence area west of Casanova Street and had found only 19 "guest" and "rooms for rent" signs. Building Inspector Floyd Adams pointed out that the extent of commercialism in the residence area is not evident through signs, since the council has restricted the use of signs. He said that according to a survey he made for the council in 1948 there were 113 non-residence uses in existence in the area from Ocean Avenue to Santa Lucia, West of San Carlos. Of these, 36 were non-conforming, in existence before the present zoning ordinance. However, he had evidence of 57 illegal rooming houses and apartments, and 20 he knew to be in violation but did not have legal evidence of the fact.

This condition existing in 1948-49 has become more acute in the interim, he concluded.

Carmel Foundation Notes

On Wednesday the Town House audience will hear Mr. Pio Junco, a pupil of Zuloaga, Spanish painter. Mr. Junco has exhibited in all major exhibitions in America, including the Corcoran, Metropolitan and National academy. He will talk of his experience with Zuloaga, and of his own painting, some examples of which are being shown now in the Art Gallery of Carmel Valley. Tea will be served.

The exhibit of paintings by Mrs. M. J. Kosty continues at Town House.

Newcomers are always welcome to the following group activities: Painting on Tuesday afternoons; woodcarving on Friday afternoons; chess on Thursdays; cards on Fridays. The woodcarving class begins at 1:00 o'clock, other activities at 2:00.

12th Night or Salome? Tryouts Will Decide Theater Production

Salome was staged by Heron some years ago with great success. In reviewing the season, the Pine Cone had this to say:

"There are three theaters in operation in Carmel. One is the famous open-air Forest Theater, founded in the early days of Carmel by Herbert Heron. Here each summer, amidst the pine trees and the moonlight, elaborate plays are produced.

"The theatrical treat of the season this year was Heron's presentation of Oscar Wilde's play, Salome. It was one of the outstanding productions of the Forest Theater and one that will live long in the memories of the audiences that saw it during the three nights that it was given."

There are just under 20 characters in each of the two plays, ranging from bits of two or three lines to parts of wonderful opportunity for those portraying them.

In Twelfth Night there are three remarkable roles for women, all totally different: Viola, Olivia, and Maria. There are five big men's roles: Malvolio, Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, Feste the Fool, and the Duke Orsino. Sebastian, Fabian, and a number of small parts make up the cast.

Outside of the ladies of the court, there are only two women in Salome: the famous title role (with the dance of the seven veils) and Herodias, wife of the tetrarch. Jokanaan (John the Baptist), the young Syrian captain, the page of Herodias, the first soldier—these are not very long, but are rich in color and individuality. The part of Herod, the tetrarch, is of course the big role among the men.

Those who don't care to try for acting parts are more than welcome to attend the try-outs, and will be greeted with very kind words if they wish to serve on the production staff. Settings must be built and decorated, costumes must be out and sewed and fitted, posters must be distributed, tickets must be sold, properties gathered or made, lights operated, and many other essential things must be done before a show can be
